Dear Tradeprint,

I'm very excited to submit my application today for a position as a Frontend Engineer for Tradeprint, I have always wanted to work for a company like Tradeprint because of its work ethics and diversity of working culture.

As the sole front-end engineer for freelance, I am skilled in languages like Reactjs, Html, CSS, Javascript, Sass, and bootstrap. I've become very good at balancing my roles, on any given day, I might be building a front-end website for a client. and I have built apps like the Air pollution tracking app with Reactjs, A portfolio website, and other amazing apps, I am currently working on a blog app using Reactjs as the front-end.

My work requires a great deal of self-discipline and attention to detail, but that sort of balancing act is part of what makes the job fun, one of my previous clients once told me that I always seem to be happiest when I'm solving problems, and I'd agree. I've spent the last year working on countless process and technical improvements for my clients, and it shows the improvements I made to their front-end website, resulting in an increase in customer conversion.

I take time every day to continue to improve on my own skills, both technical and otherwise; when I realized that I'd have to start creating presentations for clients, for example, I immediately enrolled in an online public speaking course, even though I'd always been nervous about presenting in front of others. I knew that public speaking skills would help, so I did my best to gain them.

I would be thrilled to use every one of these skills in the service of Tradeprint. My background in web development has given me experience with maintaining code quality and building out improved products, my attention to detail has ensured that I'm able to complete multiple tasks in a timely and thorough manner.

I'm incredibly excited about the opportunity to become a part of Tradeprint and I hope you'll be just as happy to have me. Thank you very much for your consideration!

Looking forward to hearing from you,
